EXECUTIVE SESSION

The meeting was called to order at 8:05 a.m. A roll call was taken: Gigstad, Grimes, Kosman, Lewis, Lindau and Renner; Cady, Hollis and Wetherell were present. Christensen was absent.
Ms. Grimes moved and Mr. Lewis seconded a motion to go into Executive Session for the purpose of discussing personnel and honorary degree items. Gigstad, Grimes, Kosman, Lewis, Lindau and Renner; Cady, Hollis and Wetherell voted aye. Motion carried.

Ms. Lindau moved and Mr. Lewis seconded a motion to go out of Executive Session at 8:45 a.m. and reconvene in a Strategic Planning Work Session at 9:00 a.m. Gigstad, Grimes, Kosman, Lewis, Lindau and Renner; Cady, Hollis and Wetherell voted aye. Motion carried.

STRATEGIC PLANNING WORK SESSION

The Strategic Planning Work Session was called to order at 9:10 a.m. The Board discussed the following two issues.

Teacher Education – Teacher Shortage

Dr. Krause opened the discussion by stating there is a national concern about the shortage of teachers; namely the number of people going into teacher education, and the quality of teachers. He reviewed the Nebraska Department of Education’s study on teacher supply and demand, which concluded that an annual teacher shortage of 250-400 could be expected over each of the next five years. Each of the college Presidents were then asked to describe what their institutions are doing to address this expected teacher shortage.

Dr. Krepel reported that Chadron State College has seen an increase in the number of students entering student teaching programs, from 105 in 1998-99 to 123 in 1999-2000. The quality of students entering the teacher preparation program is quite high, at or above the national ACT average and with an average GPA of 3.11. Dr. Krepel referenced a report by the American Association for Employment and Education that indicated a wide variety of disciplines will experience teacher shortages. The report also identified factors that will affect the supply of teachers; namely, retirements, the number of students going into teacher education programs, and the adequacy of salaries to attract and retain talented individuals to the teaching profession. Dr. Pat Colgate, Dean of Education, described the process used to accept students into the teacher education program. He noted that many of the students are from small rural communities and return to small communities to teach. Chadron State College has established a mentoring program for first-year teachers throughout Chadron’s service region.

Mr. Renner suggested establishing 240 full scholarships for students interested in entering the discipline areas experiencing teacher shortages, in return for a guarantee that they would teach in Nebraska for a specified number of years.

Dr. Johnson reported that Peru State College has 100 students entering their student teaching program this year, and the teacher education program has the largest number of majors registered. Peru is historically a teacher training institution, and that continues today. There is strong support on campus for the teacher education program. He also indicated that a large number of the teacher education majors are taking courses at off-campus locations. This presents a difficulty of uniformity between on-campus and off-campus student focus; on-campus students seem to receive more attention. Most students come from the counties surrounding Peru State College and, like Chadron, want to return to those communities to teach. Dr. Johnson reported that Peru State College has developed a new initiative to prepare teacher education majors to work with “at risk” students in middle school and high school. This extra, specialized training would be offered prior to the internship year and increase the number of hours education majors would spend in a middle school or high school working with students at risk. Area school superintendents see this as a major need in their schools, and view this training as a desirable quality in the teachers they recruit in the future. Dr. Johnson also commented that several surrounding states perceive Nebraska as an “export state” for teachers due to the lower cost of education in Nebraska and more competitive salaries outside of Nebraska.

Dr. Stearns reported that Wayne State College is part of the National Network on Education Renewal, and she and several staff members attended a conference this past summer. She addressed earlier comments regarding status deprivation, salary deprivation and no market responsiveness to say that these problems are “our” problems. Collaborative pre-Kindergarten to post-Doctorate efforts are needed, in which teacher quality is addressed; efforts that subsidize teachers by offering tax relief or scholarships. She called attention to the following suggestions found in the information provided to Board members: “Some states offer incentive funding programs to public four-year institutions to recruit students in high demand areas. For example, the Missouri Coordinating Board for Higher Education Funding for Results program rewards institutions that design programs aimed at attracting and preparing qualified students for the diverse challenges facing the state’s teaching workforce. Similarly, the Quality Initiative Grants offered by the Oklahoma State Regents for Higher Education encourage innovation and high quality in teacher education. The second round of grants, totaling more than $250,000, recently were awarded to five higher education institutions to strengthen their programs and promote teaching careers to qualified students. Focused specifically on initiatives that attract students from underrepresented populations into teaching, the Ohio Projects for a Diversified Teaching Force are jointly funded by the Ohio Board of Regents and State Department of Education. These grants allow colleges and universities in partnership with school districts to design programs that recruit students, incorporate knowledge and understanding for diversity in pre-service and in-service education, and design strategies to increase student and teacher retention rates. Through state resources, early outreach centers provide information and support services to promote student success in teaching. The Oklahoma Minority Teacher Recruitment Center targets minority students and teachers, but encourages all students — K-16 — to take advantage of its services. To ensure teachers to teach in high demand disciplines (such as mathematics and science), some states are developing alternative certificates that target recruitment of professionals making career changes, military personnel facing retirement, former teachers who want to return to the classroom, and people who trained to teach but never entered the profession. Today, 41 states and the District of Columbia offer alternative routes to teaching careers.” (Taken from “Preparing Quality Teachers: Issues and Trends in the States”, by Esther M. Rodriquez)

Ms. Grimes and Mr. Lewis emphasized the need for more public relations efforts and strengthening the image of teachers and teacher education throughout the state.

Dr. Krause stated he understood that Senator Bruning, of Sarpy County, was considering a legislative bill that would focus on keeping college graduates in the state through the use of state-supported scholarships and we could ask that this include graduates in teacher education. This issue will also be on the agenda for the fall meeting of the Nebraska Council for Public Higher Education (NCPHE), involving representatives from the University, State Colleges and Community Colleges. He suggested that some of the current State College scholarships might need to be shifted and targeted to teacher education.

Dr. Stearns commented that our future teachers are better because they are in a comprehensive learning environment at each campus. She also shared a concern that Nebraska's State Colleges are seen as colleges for the “late bloomers”, a stereotype that needs to be countered.

Mr. Lewis shared his experience at a recent college night for his high school son where the school counselor referred to the State Colleges as the place to go if you don't have high ACT scores or are a “late bloomer.” There is the perception that the State Colleges must have open enrollment and low cost in order to attract students; quality is being overlooked.

Ms. Cady suggested that the positive attributes of teacher education and the Nebraska State Colleges need to be publicized to a greater degree.

Board members agreed that marketing and promoting the Nebraska State Colleges is necessary. The current teacher shortage presents a unique opportunity to promote the System. Ms. Kosman stressed that Board members and administrators need to say students are “choosing” the State Colleges because they want a smaller institutional setting and more attention, not because they can't meet the University entrance requirements, because many State College students could meet those entrance requirements.

Follow-up Report on Financial Aid Programs

Dr. Krause introduced the financial aid report compiled by the System Office with assistance from the campuses, and distributed to Board members as follow-up to the discussions held in previous Board meetings.

Cost of attendance for the academic year 1998-99 averaged $7,500 (including tuition, fees, room, board, books, transportation and personal expenses). The average expected family contribution was approximately $2,500, leaving $5,000 anticipated need per student. On average 85% of a student's need is met with scholarships, grants, college work study and student loans. The remaining 15% represents the student’s additional out-of-pocket expenses.

Several scenarios of financial aid were shared. Following is the scenario for an average Nebraska State College resident dependent student:

| Cost of attendance: $7,500 |
| Expected family contribution: $2,545 |
| Anticipated student need: $4,955 |
| Pell Grant $450 |
| SEOG Grant $300 |
| Subsidized Stafford Loan $2,625 |
| Perkins Loan $950 |
| Unmet student need: $630 |

Generally, as the expected family contribution increases, grant money becomes less available and students are required to take on a greater proportion of loan debt. Average student debt after attending a Nebraska State College for four years is $9,000-$10,000.

The report also demonstrated the significant shift in financial aid from grants to loans at each of the State Colleges...
During the 1990’s. At Chadron State College the dollar volume of Pell grants has decreased –4.00% between 1991 and 1997, while the dollar volume of need-based student loans has increased +186.35% during the same time period. Similarly, the number of students receiving Pell grants has decreased –6.61%, while the number of students receiving need-based loans has increased +119.80%.

At Peru State College the dollar volume of Pell grants has decreased –15.44% between 1991 and 1997, while the dollar volume of need-based student loans has increased +51.41%. Similarly, the number of students receiving Pell grants has decreased –16.67%, while the number of students receiving need-based loans has increased +33.21%.

At Wayne State College the dollar volume of Pell grants has decreased –1.22% between 1991 and 1997, while the dollar volume of need-based student loans has increased +111.30% during the same time period. Similarly, the number of students receiving Pell grants has decreased –4.60%, while the number of students receiving need-based loans has increased +37.69%.

INFORMATION ITEMS

Executive Director, Presidents’ and Student Trustees’ Reports

Dr. Krause provided details of the December 10 meeting with the Coordinating Commission to be held in Lincoln. The Board of Trustees will hold a strategic planning work session around 9:00 in the morning, followed by the public session after lunch. The joint meeting with the Coordinating Commission will be scheduled around 2:30 or 3:00 p.m. He also announced that the fall meeting of the Nebraska Council for Public Higher Education (NCPHE) would be held on November 4. Dr. Gigstad and Mr. Renner are the Board’s representatives on this council, which includes representatives from the University and Community College sectors.
Dr. Stearns announced recent campus events, including the celebration of the Little Priest Tribal College accreditation, the American premiere of the play Café Zeitgeist on the Wayne State College campus, and Homecoming activities this weekend. A $5,000,000 capital campaign has been announced, which will focus on scholarships, campus beautification and facility improvements. A lead gift of $1,000,000 has been received from Dan Gardner.

Dr. Johnson reported on Peru State College’s $4,000,000 capital campaign that is in its silent phase. He also announced that the campus greenhouse was purchased and moved in August to another city property; approximately 60 community people physically lifted the greenhouse and carried it nine blocks to its new location. Peru State College will have a week-long Artist Series, which will include sculpture Tom Palmerton who will create art with a variety of classes, and the play “Rumored” will be performed (the first play in three years). Dr. Johnson stated that there seems to be a renewed spirit on the Peru State College campus this year.

Dr. Krepel reported that, for the fourth year in a row, the Chadron State College incoming freshmen average ACT scores are higher than the national average, which he feels reflects the attractiveness of the institution and the quality education provided by the public school systems. He announced that over 340 student placements were made to summer internships (nearly 6,000 hours), and the annual Band Day, which included clinics, field competition and a parade, recorded three times the number of bands that participated in 1998. Dr. Krepel reported that a very positive financial aid and state supported funds audit will be available at the November Board meeting; and a number of campus diversity activities are underway. A Chadron State College office is scheduled to open on the Mid Plains Community College campus in North Platte in October to respond to needs of southwest Nebraska; and joint academic meetings are scheduled between Chadron State College and Western Community College to discuss transfer, collaboration, and developmental education. He concluded by thanking the Board for meeting on the Chadron State College campus.

Mr. Wetherell commented on the upcoming Wayne State College homecoming activities.

Mr. Hollis reported that Peru State College has become the charter chapter in Nebraska of the International Reading Association, which emphasizes adult teachers becoming more involved with reading to younger children. The Campus Activities Board is working with Peru community establishments to organize theatre nights and bowling nights; and is working on improving the fluidity of fee payments to students.

Ms. Cady thanked the Board members on behalf of the Student Senate for meeting with them. Recent and upcoming campus activities include the Science Fair, Octoberfest, a Leadership conference and a campus Special Olympics. She reported that the Coalition Building Team for Diversity has scheduled monthly campus videos, and the Task Force Against Alcohol and Drugs is involved in a mentoring program with area middle schools.

Dr. Gigstad thanked Dr. Krepel on behalf of the Board for the hospitality shown to Board members.

ADJOURNMENT -- The meeting was adjourned at 11:40 a.m. so members could attend the Miller Hall Dedication Ceremony.
